

FIRST BANK STOCK CORP. v. MINNESOTA.

APPEAL FROM THE SUPREME COURT OF MINNESOTA.

No. 647. Argued March 31, 1937.—Decided April 26, 1937.

A Delaware corporation transacted its corporate and fiscal business in Minnesota, maintaining in that State a business office and holding there its meetings of stockholders, directors and executive committee. It owned a controlling interest in the stock of a number of banks of several States. Stock certificates of the subsidiaries were kept in Minnesota and there it received the dividends thereon, and declared and disbursed the dividends upon its own shares. Through a wholly-owned subsidiary corporation, organized and doing business in Minnesota, it maintained a compensated service for the banks which it controlled, offering advice as to their accounting practices, making recommendations concerning loans, commercial paper and interest rates, and making suggestions regarding their purchase and sale of securities. It planned for them advertising campaigns, and supplied advertising material. Thus it maintained within the State an integrated business of protecting its investments in bank shares, and enhancing their value, by the active exercise of its power of control through stock ownership of its subsidiary banks.

Held, that the corporation's commercial domicile was in Minnesota and that its shares of stock in North Dakota and Montana banking corporations were taxable by Minnesota. P. 237.

Whether the same shares could, consistently with the Fourteenth Amendment, be taxed also in North Dakota and Montana, is a question not decided.

197 Minn. 544; 267 N. W. 519, affirmed.

APPEAL from a judgment in favor of the State of Minnesota in proceedings to enforce collections of delinquent taxes.

Mr. Joseph H. Colman, with whom Messrs. John Junell, Clark R. Fletcher, and Leland W. Scott were on the brief, for appellant.

The appellant contends that only one State can constitutionally impose a property tax on intangibles in the case of state bank shares. It is the State of incorporation of the bank which can impose the tax and not the State of the domicile of the shareholder or of the business situs of the shares. Appellant further contends that the shares of stock it holds in state banks located without Minnesota have a business situs, if any, at the location of the banks and not in Minnesota.

It is the position of appellant that the Minnesota statute, as construed by the Minnesota Supreme Court to impose a property tax upon appellant's shares of stock in banks organized under the laws of foreign States, is, for the above reasons, unconstitutional under the Fourteenth Amendment. Appellant does not here contend that the Minnesota statute is unconstitutional in any way other than in its application to shares of stock in foreign state banks.

Mr. William S. Ervin, Attorney General of Minnesota, and Mr. Frank J. Williams, with whom Mr. Matthias N. Orfield, Deputy Attorney General, was on the brief, for appellee.

The right of a State to tax property within its territorial jurisdiction is inherent and an attribute of sovereignty.

This Court, in the process of developing a symmetrical system of preventing multi-state taxation of the same economic interest, has laid down certain rules by which the right of a given State to tax intangibles is to be determined.

The facts in this case bring the property here in question, under the rules as formulated, within the jurisdiction of the State of Minnesota. The owner has a "commercial domicile" in Minnesota; the property is physically present in that State; and the owner has given the property a business situs there by employing it within that State in the conduct of a super banking business, which is a new and important economic unit.

Minnesota has a constitutional right to tax the property in question.

Appellant's position is untenable in the light of recent decisions of this Court.

The right to tax stock in state banks rests on fundamentally different considerations from the right to tax national bank stock.

MR. JUSTICE STONE delivered the opinion of the Court.

This appeal from a judgment of the Supreme Court of Minnesota, Judicial Code, § 237, involves the question whether appellant, a Delaware corporation doing business in Minnesota, may be required, consistently with the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment, to pay a property tax laid by Minnesota upon appellant's shares of stock in Montana and North Dakota state banking corporations.

The trial court concluded that, as the shares are lawfully taxed by Montana and North Dakota, it would be a denial of due process to tax them in Minnesota. The Supreme Court of the state reversed, holding that as appellant has acquired a commercial domicile within the state, and as its shares in the Montana and North Dakota banks are assets of the business carried on by appellant in Minnesota, they are rightly taxed there rather than in Montana or North Dakota. 197 Minn. 544; 267 N. W. 519.

Appellant is qualified to do business in Minnesota, and in fact transacts its corporate business and fiscal affairs there. It maintains a business office within the state and holds there its meetings of stockholders, directors and their executive committee. It is the owner of a controlling interest in the stock of a large number of banks, trust companies and other financial institutions, located in the Ninth Federal Reserve District. The stock certificates are kept in Minnesota, where appellant receives dividends declared by its subsidiaries, and where it declares and disburses dividends upon its own stock.

Through a wholly-owned subsidiary corporation, organized and doing business in Minnesota, it maintains a compensated service for the banks which it controls. It offers advice as to their accounting practices, makes recommendations concerning loans, commercial paper and interest rates, and makes suggestions regarding their purchase and sale of securities. It also plans for them advertising campaigns, and supplies advertising material. Appellant thus maintains within the state an integrated business of protecting its investments in bank shares, and enhancing their value, by the active exercise of its power of control through stock ownership of its subsidiary banks.

Appellant is to be regarded as legally domiciled in Delaware, the place of its organization, and as taxable there upon its intangibles, see Cream of Wheat Co. v. Grand Forks, 253 U. S. 325, 328; Johnson Oil Refining Co. v. Oklahoma, 290 U. S. 158, 161; Virginia v. Imperial Coal Sales Co., 293 U. S. 15, 19, at least in the absence of activities identifying them with some other place as their "business situs." But it is plain that the business which appellant carries on in Minnesota, or directs from its offices maintained there, is sufficiently identified with Minnesota to establish a "commercial domicile" there, and to give a business situs there, for purposes of taxation, to intangibles which are used in the business or are incidental to it, and have thus "become integral parts of some local business." Wheeling Steel Corp. v. Fox, 298 U. S. 193, 210; see Farmers Loan & Trust Co. v. Minnesota, 280 U. S. 204, 213; Beidler v. South Carolina Tax Comm'n, 282 U. S. 1, 8; First National Bank v. Maine, 284 U. S. 312, 331.

The doctrine that intangibles may be taxed at their business situs, as distinguished from the legal domicile of their owner, has usually been applied to obligations to pay money, acquired in the course of a localized business. New Orleans v. Stempel, 175 U. S. 309; Bristol v. Washington County, 177 U. S. 133; Board of Assessors v. Comptoir National, 191 U. S. 388; Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. New Orleans, 205 U. S. 395; Wheeling Steel Corp. v. Fox, supra, 212, 213. But it is equally applicable to shares of corporate stock which, because of their use in a business of the owner, may be treated as localized, for purposes of taxation, at the place of the business, see First National Bank v. Maine, supra, 331; cf. De Ganay v. Lederer, 250 U. S. 376, 382. Appellant's entire business in Minnesota is founded on its ownership of the shares of stock and their use as instruments of corporate control. They are as much "integral parts" of the local business as accounts receivable in a merchandising business, or the bank accounts in which the proceeds of the accounts receivable are deposited upon collection. Compare Wheeling Steel Corp. v. Fox, supra, 212-214. Thus identified with the business conducted by appellant in Minnesota, they are as subject to local property taxes as they would be if the owner were a private individual domiciled in the state.

Appellant does not deny that it is subject to taxation in Minnesota on some intangibles. In making its 1934 return of "moneys and credits" for taxation under Minn. Stat. 1927 (Mason) § 2337 et seq., which imposes the present tax, appellant included bank deposits within and without the state, promissory notes, bonds and other evidences of indebtedness. It does not challenge the tax imposed on its shares of stock in corporations organized and doing business without the state, other than those in the Montana and North Dakota banks. It says that these states have adopted the only feasible scheme of taxation of the shares of state banks which will admit of a state property tax on national bank shares, since R. S. § 5219 (12 U. S. C. § 548), permits shares of national banks to be taxed only by the state where the bank does business, and then only if they are not assessed "at a greater rate than . . . other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens . . . coming into competition with the business of national banks." See First National Bank v. Anderson, 269 U. S. 341, 348; Minnesota v. First National Bank, 273 U. S. 561. Both states assess for property taxation the shares of national banks doing business within their limits and assess in like manner the shares of state banks, and thus avoid discrimination in taxation between the shares of national and of state banks.

Appellant argues that every state may establish a tax situs within the state for shares of stock in its own banking corporations, and that Montana and North Dakota have done so by providing, in pursuance of their scheme for the local taxation of banking corporations, that the shares shall be taxable there. Corry v. Baltimore, 196 U. S. 466; see National Bank v. Commonwealth, 9 Wall. 353; Tappan v. Merchants' National Bank, 19 Wall. 490; Rhode Island Trust Co. v. Doughton, 270 U. S. 69, 81. It insists that as the shares are properly taxable by the respective states of their origin, and as due process forbids the imposition of a property tax upon intangibles in more than one state, they cannot be taxed in Minnesota.

The logic is inexorable if the premises are accepted. But we do not find it necessary to decide whether taxation of the shares in Montana or North Dakota is foreclosed by sustaining the Minnesota tax. Nor need we inquire whether a non-resident shareholder, by acquiring stock in a local corporation, so far subjects his investment to the control and laws of the state which has created the corporation as to preclude any objection, on grounds of due process, to the taxation of the shares there, even though they are subject to taxation elsewhere, at their business situs.<sup>1</sup> We leave those questions open. It is enough for present purposes that this Court has often upheld and never denied the constitutional power to tax shares of stock at the place of the domicile of the owner. Hawley v. Malden, 232 U. S. 1, 11, 12; Klein v. Board of Tax Supervisors, 282 U. S. 19, 24; Wright v. Louisville & Nashville R. Co., 195 U. S. 219; Kidd v. Alabama, 188 U. S. 730; Darnell v. Indiana, 226 U. S. 390. And it has fully recognized that the business situs of an intangible affords an adequate basis for fixing a place of taxation. See Wheeling Steel Corp. v. Fox, supra; De Ganay v. Lederer, supra; cf. Safe Deposit & Trust Co. v. Virginia, 280 U. S. 83, 91.

The rule that property is subject to taxation at its situs within the territorial jurisdiction of the taxing state, readily understood and applied with respect to tangibles, is in itself meaningless when applied to intangibles which, since they are without physical characteristics, can have no location in space. See Wheeling Steel Corp. v. Fox, supra, 209. The resort to a fiction by the attribution of a tax situs to an intangible is only a means of symbolizing, without fully revealing, those considerations which are persuasive grounds for deciding that a particular place is appropriate for the imposition of the tax. Mobilia sequuntur personam, which has won unqualified acceptance when applied to the taxation of intangibles, Blodgett v. Silberman, 277 U. S. 1, 9-10, states a rule without disclosing the reasons for it. But we have recently had occasion to point out that enjoyment by the resident of a state of the protection of its laws is inseparable from responsibility for sharing the costs of its government, and that a tax measured by the value of rights protected is but an equitable method of distributing the burdens of government among those who are privileged to enjoy its benefits. See New York ex rel. Cohn v. Graves, 300 U. S. 308.

---

<sup>1</sup> See Corry v. Baltimore, 196 U. S. 466, 476, 477; Tappan v. Merchants' National Bank, 19 Wall. 490, 499, 500; Flash v. Conn, 109 U. S. 371, 377; Whitman v. Oxford National Bank, 176 U. S. 559, 564; Hancock National Bank v. Farnum, 176 U. S. 640, 643; Nashua Savings Bank v. Anglo-American Co., 189 U. S. 221, 230; Canada Southern Ry. Co. v. Gebhard, 109 U. S. 527, 537; Relfe v. Rundle, 103 U. S. 222, 226; Bernheimer v. Converse, 206 U. S. 516, 533; Converse v. Hamilton, 224 U. S. 243, 260; Clark v. Williard, 292 U. S. 112, 121; Royal Arcanum v. Green, 237 U. S. 531, 542; Modern Woodmen of America v. Mixer, 267 U. S. 544, 551; Broderick v. Rosner, 294 U. S. 629, 643.

The economic advantages realized through the protection, at the place of domicile, of the ownership of rights in intangibles, the value of which is made the measure of the tax, bear a direct relationship to the distribution of burdens which the tax effects. These considerations support the taxation of intangibles at the place of domicile, at least where they are not shown to have acquired a business situs elsewhere, as a proper exercise of the power of government. Like considerations support their taxation at their business situs, for it is there that the owner in every practical sense invokes and enjoys the protection of the laws, and in consequence realizes the economic advantages of his ownership. We cannot say that there is any want of due process in the taxation of the corporate shares in Minnesota, irrespective of the extent of the control over them which the due process clause may save to the states of incorporation.

Affirmed.

MR. JUSTICE BUTLER took no part in the consideration or decision of this case.